Idaho Landscapes is the only scholarly publication of its kind featuring stories of interest about Idaho including peer-reviewed essays in history, science and art, and juried photography about the human nature of Idaho and the West. It is published with support from Boise State's Division of Research and the College of Social Sciences and Public Affairs

May 5 (Cinco de Mayo)
6 p.m.

Boise State University Center on Main
Alaska Building
1020 Main St., Boise, ID

“The date [Cinco de Mayo] has surpassed borders and is now celebrated in different countries such as the United States, where Mexican-Americans look to portray a unique image of Mexico: one of tradition, culture and history.”
said Ricardo Pineda, Consul of Mexico to Idaho and Montana

“We are pleased to collaborate with the Mexican Consul as we celebrate the release of the latest Idaho Landscapes. This new edition is the very first issue dedicated solely to helping us understand both the historical and cultural impact the Mexican-American community has had in the development of Idaho.” said Melissa Lavitt, Boise State University's SSPA Dean
